We believe great things happen when a city comes together to develop a long-term vision for the future. We believe it's time to begin the conversation.

Long considered simply a way to "get there" or "get through there," urban interstates take on new meaning as communities like Dallas struggle to replace their aging transportation infrastructure and promote a great neighborhood experience. Changing views, needs, and expectations for greater neighborhood and regional connectivity and livability are motivating communities to examine both traditional and innovative transportation solutions.

Combined with funding limitations and population growth, the responsibility for urban planning, economic development, and city building become the collective work of agencies, stakeholders and individuals to be successful.

The CityMAP team is working with stakeholders and the general public to identify neighborhood redevelopment, preservation, and transportation scenarios to frame a comprehensive vision for the city's future. Scenarios will be identified by integrating the community's vision with practical transportation and urban design solutions, construction and funding feasibility. Each scenario will promote a vision and demonstrate the tangible and intangible benefits to Dallas communities within the urban core.
